BEST MAGAZINE ARTICLE—FIRST QUARTER 1951

The annual contest for the best Lincoln magazine article printed during the first quarter of the year seems to have evolved into a family affair. Mrs. Ruth Painter Randall's contribution in the New York Times Magazine for Feb. 11, 1951 entitled "Mr. Lincoln: A Portrait by His Wife" received the approval of the Lincoln National Life Foundation Advisory Group. She not only won the magazine award last year but her husband, Dr. James G. Randall of the University of Illinois, for the two years, 1947 and 1949, was honored with this recognition.

Several magazines which usually carry Lincoln contributions are now referring to their quarterly publications as Spring, Summer, Fall and Winter editions. This practice requires that in the future we make eligible for consideration contributions in both the Winter or Spring issues of the quarterlies, but we still must limit monthly and weekly publications to the first three months of the year.

Magazine articles appearing during the first quarter of 1951 are listed below under author with subject of discussion and source following.
